WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 HIGH RISK in the Eastern Mid Coast today and in the Sacramento Valley/Foothills today and Monday for Gusty N-NE wind/low Relative Humidity (RH) ***

High pressure to our west will produce hot, dry, dry and breezy weather through Monday. Today N-NE winds will gust to 25-35 mph from the western Cascade-Sierra slopes to the eastern portion of the Mid Coast, including Lake, Napa, and far eastern Sonoma Counties. The N winds will end in the coastal mountains later today, but continue at slightly lighter speeds in the Sacramento Valley and surrounding foothills tonight through Monday night, finally ending early Tuesday. Minimum afternoon RH today will be 5-15% today, and humidity will only recover to 25-35% in the valley/foothills tonight and Monday night. There is a High Risk of significant fires in the Sacramento Valley and surrounding foothills through Monday, and in the Mid Coast PSA as far west as Lake, Napa, and far Eastern Sonoma Counties today. The higher terrain of the North Coast PSA will have a few areas of elevated fire potential due to gusty NE/offshore winds and low RH on through Monday. The marine layer is becoming deeper and it will move farther inland with the sea breeze this afternoon. Outside of areas affected by the sea breeze temperatures will be 8-12 degrees above normal today and 5-8 degrees above normal Monday.

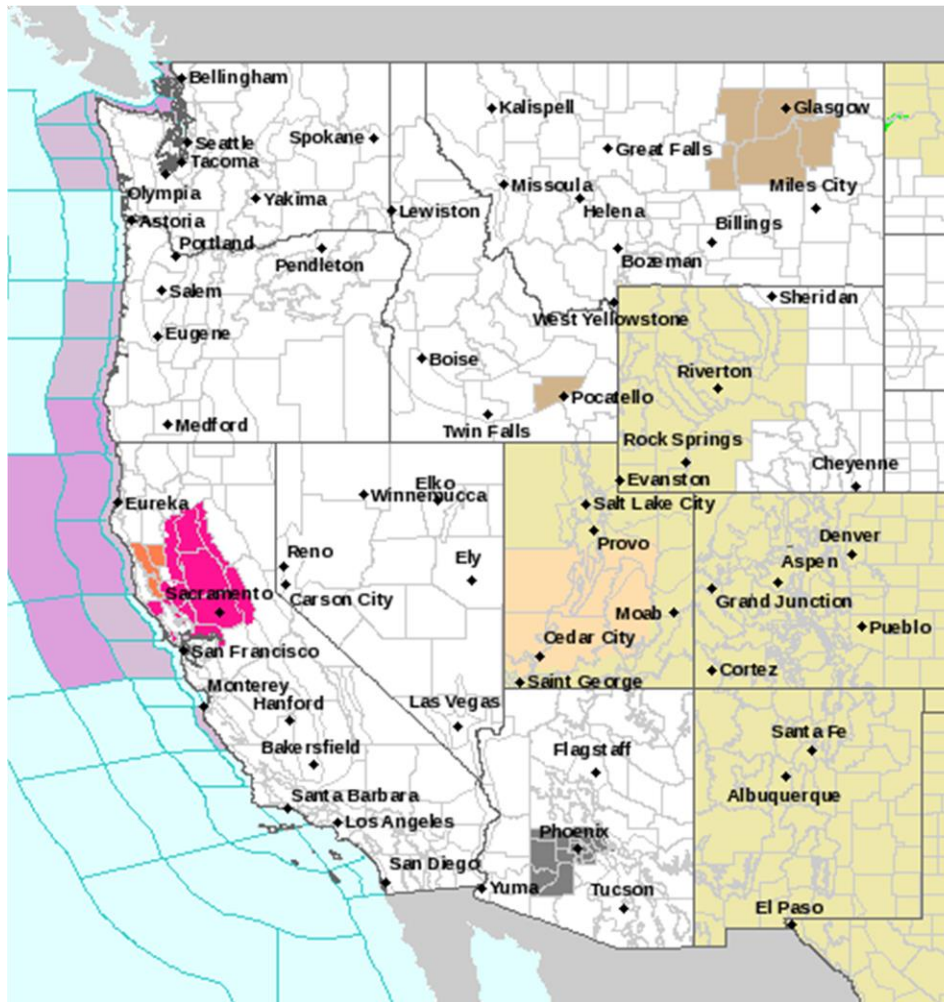

A low pressure trough will set up over the west coast beginning Tuesday and remain in place all week. During the middle of the week it may produce strong enough S-SW winds east of the Cascade-Sierra crest to create High Risk conditions due to strong winds and low RH.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

There will be little change in temperature and humidity across the region today as strong high pressure remains off the Northern California Coast. Maximum temperatures over the mountains and coastal valleys will be in the upper 70s and 80s while inland valley and foothill areas will be in the 90s to 102. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 15% and 30% away from the coastal areas, but minimum humidity will be in the single digits and teens across the deserts. Isolated thunderstorms will be possible over the Sierra Crest this afternoon. Winds will be light today, except there will be strong and erratic winds in and near any thunderstorm that develops. A slow cooling trend will take place across interior portions of the region Monday through Wednesday as a Pacific trough drops down the West Coast. Westerly afternoon and evening winds of 20 to 30 mph with gusts to 50 mph will surface across the wind prone mountain and desert areas Monday through Wednesday. Strong high pressure over the eastern part of the country will shift westward bringing substantial warming along with minimum humidity in the single digits and teens away from the coast late this week. Widespread triple digit heat will be likely across the valleys and foothills by Friday. Northerly nighttime winds of 15 to 25 mph with gusts to 40 mph will surface across much of Santa Barbara County and the Grapevine Thursday and Friday. The high pressure area will become centered over the Four Corners Area by next weekend which may allow for isolated afternoon showers and thunderstorms to develop over the mountains and deserts of Southern California east of the Cajon Pass.
